the basics

astrology dates back to babylon nearly 3,000 years ago. it is the study of the movements of planets and their relation to events that happen on earth. positions of planets and stars like the sun and moon can influence a person's birth chart, which could potentially effect their personality and temperament. most people know about sun signs (which is whatever sign the sun was in when you were born), but there are so many more planets and placements that influence a birth chart.

a quick run-down of each sign, their dates, ruling planet, and qualities etc.:

aries

march 20 - april 21

ruling planet: mars

element: fire

qualities: go-getter, leader, energetic, expressive

taurus

april 20 - may 20

ruling planet: venus

element: earth

qualities: loyal, genuine, stubborn, materialistic

gemini

may 22 - june 21

ruling planet: mercury

element: air

qualities: talkative, intellectual, quick-witted, life of the party

cancer

what is a birth chart?

a birth chart is a circular diagram that shows all of the planets positions at the time you were born, including the sign and house that the planet is in. people use them to understand both themselves and how the world around them affects them.

there are some placements that are extra important, like the sun, rising (ascendant), and moon placements. these three together are usually called the big three, and they make up essential parts of a person's personality.

sun sign: represents your creative life force, will to live, and conscious mind rising sign: represents your physical body and social personality moon sign: represents your emotions, expressiveness, and intuition some other planetary placements that are important to know:

mercury sign: represents communication and the nature of your thoughts mars sign: represents your ambition, passion, and aggression venus sign: represents the way you love and who you love jupiter sign: represents your creativity, power and blessings

houses

birth charts are divided into 12 parts, called houses, that represent particular areas of life. when planets are in different houses, it means that they are being expressed in a certain area of life.

what each of the houses represent:

1st house: self image, impressions, physical appearance

2nd house: self worth and money

3rd house: communication and environment

4th house: family, roots, security, home

5th house: self-expression, love, creativity

6th house: health and work

7th house: marriage and partnership

8th house: transformation, change, sexuality

9th house: beliefs, ideals, philosophy

10th house: responsibility, reputation, success

11th house: friendship, community, charity, wishes

12th house: secrets, growth, dreams

my personal opinion on why astrology is useful and meaningful

many will argue that astrology “isn’t real” or “isn’t scientific”, but, in my opinion it doesn't have to be “real” to be useful or introspective. astrology is all about finding personal meaning, and can be helpful for self discovery. the stars and planets have been mapped for thousands of years, and why not use them and their representations to your advantage?

astrology is just another type of spiritual system that helps humans through their everyday lives. and personally, astrology has made me understand myself more throughout the years. for the most part though, its just something fun and interesting to learn about.

the eleventh house is the house of friendship and community, qualities that i'd say are important to every one of us, including my friend group. humans need community and connection to stay happy, and even sane. so, i wanted to make “eleventh house” about my friends and their incredible personalities, but also spread knowledge to others as well. astrology has become something me and almost every one of my friends have been interested in, and it's fun to start banter about what makes up the personalities of each other. the creation of “eleventh house” has been meaningful to me in a variety of ways, and getting to capture my friends at this time in their lives, and to celebrate them has warmed my heart greatly. with love, sophie
